

EMPLOYMENT APPEALS BOARD DECISION
2019-EAB-0781

Affirmed
Disqualification

PROCEDURAL HISTORY: On June 27, 2019, the Department served notice of an administrative decision concluding that claimant voluntarily left work with Tigard Vision Center Inc. on February 19, 2019 without good cause, and was disqualified from benefits effective February 17, 2019 (decision # 103943). On July 11, 2019, claimant filed a timely request for hearing. On August 5, 2019, ALJ Murdock conducted a hearing on decision # 65157, and on August 7, 2019, issued Order No. 19-UI-134664, affirming decision # 103943. On August 13, 2019, claimant filed a timely application for review with the Employment Appeals Board (EAB).

EAB did not consider the claimant's written argument when reaching this decision because they did not include a statement declaring that they provided a copy of their argument to the opposing party or parties as required by OAR 471-041-0080(2)(a) (May 13, 2019).

FINDINGS OF FACT: (1) Tigard Vision Center employed claimant as a front office worker from February 18, 2019 to February 19, 2019.

(2) Claimant did not realize when hired that she would need to arrive at work by 6:45 a.m. on Fridays. She learned of the early start time on Fridays on her first day of work.

(3) Claimant has a restricted driver's license. She was prohibited from driving before 8:00 a.m. and after 5:00 p.m. or outside her county of residence.

(4) Upon learning of the early Friday start, and that she would need to travel between three employer locations in more than one county, claimant researched public transportation. Public transportation was not a feasible option. Claimant asked DMV if she could change her license restrictions. Claimant learned that it would take a couple of weeks to change her restrictions.

(5) Claimant felt "embarrassed" to tell the employer that she had a hardship license. Audio record at 9:40-9:55. She felt "it was my personal issue. Something that I've never talked about to anybody about in the past eight years. Never an employer." Audio record at 13:35-13:50. Claimant was not willing to talk to the employer about her license restrictions. She also never told the employer generally that she would have difficulties with transportation on Fridays.

(6) On February 19, 2019, claimant notified the employer that she was quitting work.

(7) The employer had previously temporarily modified employees' schedules while they adjusted their hardship licenses to accommodate early start times on Fridays and traveling to all three of the employer's locations. The employer had also accommodated other employees' scheduling needs when they had legal issues. Had claimant discussed her hardship license or transportation problems with the employer, the employer was willing to temporarily modify claimant's schedule, too.

A claimant who leaves work voluntarily is disqualified from the receipt of benefits unless they prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that they had good cause for leaving work when they did. ORS 657.176(2)(c); Young v. Employment Department, 170 Or App 752, 13 P3d 1027 (2000). "Good cause . . . is such that a reasonable and prudent person of normal sensitivity, exercising ordinary common sense, would leave work." OAR 471-030-0038(4) (December 23, 2018). The standard is objective. McDowell v. Employment Department, 348 Or 605, 612, 236 P3d 722 (2010). A claimant who quits work must show that no reasonable and prudent person would have continued to work for their employer for an additional period of time.

Claimant's situation – a hardship license that restricted her from reporting to work on time on Fridays or traveling between the employer's locations – was potentially grave before she quit work. However, claimant had reasonable alternatives to quitting work when she did. Claimant had the alternatives of notifying the employer that she had a restricted license that was causing her transportation problems on Fridays and asking that the employer temporarily modify her schedule on Fridays to allow her to start work later while she had her restrictions adjusted. The employer had previously accommodated employees' schedules under similar circumstances, suggesting that the employer was more likely than not willing and able to accommodate claimant, as well. Claimant did not seek any accommodation, however, and was not willing to discuss her situation with the employer, not because she thought doing so would be futile or had reason to think the employer would not accommodate her, but because she was embarrassed to talk about her restricted license and did not want to discuss her personal issue with the employer.

Claimant had reasonable alternatives to quitting work when she did. She therefore quit work without good cause, and is disqualified from receiving unemployment insurance benefits because of this work separation.
