

EMPLOYMENT APPEALS BOARD DECISION
2019-EAB-0945

Affirmed
No Disqualification

PROCEDURAL HISTORY: On August 2, 2019, the Oregon Employment Department (the Department) served notice of an administrative decision concluding the employer discharged claimant, but not for misconduct connected with work (decision # 75356). The employer filed a timely request for hearing. On September 9, 2019, ALJ Murdock conducted a hearing, and on September 16, 2019 issued Order No. 19-UI-136519, affirming the Department's decision. On October 2, 2019, the employer filed an application for review with the Employment Appeals Board (EAB).

EAB considered the employer's written argument in reaching this decision. The employer argued that because claimant apparently had the ability to contact her therapist during one or more of the days including June 29 through July 2, 2019, "she should have been able to find the employer's telephone number in some other fashion." Written argument at 2. However, it was undisputed that claimant had been suffering from anxiety and depression for approximately six years, was on medication for her mental condition, and despite that treatment she was unable to function sufficiently to obtain the employer's phone number to call them or even leave her place of residence to notify them in person. Viewed objectively, the evidence is, at best, equally balanced as to whether claimant was consciously indifferent to the employer's interests in failing to contact the employer prior to her shift to report that she was too ill to work. In a discharge case, when the evidence on a disputed issue is evenly balanced, the uncertainty must be resolved in claimant's favor because the employer has the burden of proof. Babcock v. Employment Division, 25 Or App 661, 550 P2d 1233 (1976). Accordingly, we agree that the employer failed to establish by a preponderance of evidence that claimant willfully, or with wanton negligence, violated the employer's call in procedure on the dates in question.

EAB reviewed the entire hearing record. On de novo review and pursuant to ORS 657.275(2), the Order under review is adopted.

DECISION: Order No. 19-UI-136519 is affirmed.
